When newspapers collaborate, readers win

Dahlia Bazzaz, The Seattle Times
@DahliaBazzaz

Katie Gillespie, The Columbian
@NewsLadyKatie
Students of color in Washington state
11.1 %

Teachers of color in Washington state
Are any parts of Washington faring better than others?

Not really.

But some districts are doing unique things to try to address the issue.

But how can a mid-sized local paper in Southwest Washington and the state’s largest urban newspaper bring nuance and breadth to a story that’s so personal to so many people?

It’s interactive! You can click on your district and different races to see how representative (or not representative) the teaching body is.
Work together.
What worked?
What didn’t?
Impact!
Teacher Melissa is a change maker because she wants more teachers who speak Spanish and who have skin colors different from her own.

Seen in a first grade classroom. BRB sobbing. 😭
Thank you!